

“It is very strange that I, a boy brought up in the woods, seeing as it were but little of the world, should be drifted into the very apex of this great event.”

— Abraham Lincoln,
on the Civil War, July 1864